

Traveling with kids under 18

When a child travels with both parents:

All children under 18 years of age will be required to travel with their unabridged birth certificates along with their valid passports.

When a child travels with a single parent:

If a child under 18 years old travels with one parent, they must produce an unabridged birth certificate, a valid passport, in addition to a valid affidavit in which the absent parent gives consent for the child to travel. Alternatively, a court order granting full parental responsibilities or the death certificate of the absent parent can be provided. The affidavit should be no older than 3 months from the date of travel.

When a child under 18 years old travels with a guardian:

They must produce an unabridged birth certificate, valid passports, and an affidavit in which the parents give consent for the child to travel. Documentation stating the person's contact details and residential address, as well as the contact details and residence where the child will be staying, should also be provided.

The affidavit should be no older than 3 months from the date of travel.
